THE OTHER CONFERENCE
WHEN rain clouds threaten, most prudent persons carry an umbrella.

Man has heard talk of disarmament for a good many years, but it is evident that he still is a long way from being willing to practice it.

The first step has yet to be taken—moral disarmament.

Until that fundamental revolution in human nature occurs, realists will keep their powder dry.

Europe.
THE effort at Geneva to get the armed nations to take some step toward reducing their arms has again been adjourned.

The American delegates are reported to be ready to advise President Coolidge that there is nothing he can do.

There is, however, something this nation can do. It can build up its defenses and mind its own business.
"WHO? ME?"

THE LIBRARY
It is a very little bird that is piping its peaceful lay at the entrance to its cage.

It is a very hungry and cruel cat that is spreading its whiskers in anticipation of another meal.

Will the bird be foolish enough to leave its safe harborage and fly within reach of the cat?

The chances are that all the disarmament which will result from this latest Geneva pow-wow will consist of the transfer of the bird into the stomach of the cat.
